

Playwrights Producing Company has been promoting the original work of local playwrights in Wilmington since 1985, and screenwriters since 2002. It is indeed a gem in the local theater and film community since it is the only Theatrical Company that exclusively fills the role of showcasing only the work of local playwrights and screenwriters. PPC presents "Staged Readings" of plays and screenplays in which the actors perform with scripts in hand, and full productions of original plays and screenplays.

Staged readings allow for feedback to the author from a director, the actors and from the audience. A staged reading assumes the script is a work in progress and the feedback gives the author material to continue re-writing. Full productions allow the author to see his/her play come to life on the stage, usually for the first time.

Playwrights Producing Company invites actors from the theater, film and TV community to share in this creative endeavor by volunteering their time and talent, and over the years, the response from the acting community has been tremendous.
