

I HATE THE HAMLET

Andrew Rally.....Joel Hodge
John Barrymore.....Richard Davis
Deirdre McDavey.....Lucy Spain
Gary Peter Lefkowitz....John Krevens
Felicia Dantine.....Sarah Giarratana
Lillian Troy.....Pam Unruh
Director.....Angela Kennedy
Stage Manager....Chris Carter
Costume Designer...Regina Rose
Costume Designer.....Charles Grimes
Lighting Designer.....Richard Davis
Fight Choreographer...Rob Mann
Producer....Angela Kennedy
Producer....Richard Davis
Production Assistant....Pam Grier
Program Designer....Steve Caverno

Act One

Top Floor of a Washington Square
Apartment in New York City, 1980s

Intermission

Act Two

Scene One: Six weeks later.

Scene Two: The next morning.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

I Hate Hamlet is an endearing show, although a comedy, it reveals a poignant message about actors, stars, artists and the nature of show business. This story remains only more relevant and charming with age, much a like a fine bottle of wine. The heart of the tale is truly dedicated to the actor, past and present. Wilmington exists as such a vibrant artistic community bustling with many actors arriving each year to take a stab at fame, fortune or even hoping just to get that well-deserved SAG card. The characters in this play may seem all too familiar to many Guerilla Theatre patrons – the agent, the actor, the supportive - inspiring ingénue girlfriend... and the crazy writer-producer-director. It's a comforting comedy that exposes truth in the jest, for with even moderate artistic success, there always exists a price to pay... an internal conflict to wrestle, combined with the desire to not only succeed, but passionately exist. Our leading man, Andrew Rally receives much advice from an charming ghost, John Barrymore who latches on to Andrew with much gusto and charm. But will it be enough to lure Andrew away? What will be our hero's decision? And what price will he pay? Sit back, laugh, have a drink and allow yourself to be part of all the fun and finesse inside this haunted and delightful Manhattan apartment.

-A.K.